Harry's Hurricane Raging Off Cape Hatteras

MIAMI, Aug. 24—The first tropical storm of the 1949 hurricane season raged a short distance east of Cape Hatteras, N. C., today.

"Harry's Hurricane," as it is called in honor of President Truman's visit to Miami two days ago, apparently is curving to the north-northeast at a rate of about 18 miles an hour.

The morning advisory from the Miami weather bureau gave the location of the center of the storm at 35.1 north latitude and 75.5 west longitude.

The bureau reported that Diamond Shoals Lightship, which stands a short distance southeast of Cape Hatteras, has clocked winds at 115 miles an hour from the east-southeast.

Gates of the storm, which had east coast residents preparing since Sunday night for the blow, extend outward from 100 to 150 miles north and east of its center.

The weather bureau expects the hurricane to continue veering off in a more north-northeasterly direction at a faster rate within the next 12 to 24 hours.

Meanwhile, the North Carolina and Virginia Cape tides still are high.

Hurricane warnings are now up from Manteo, N. C., to Cape Lookout, N. C., and storm warnings have been displayed from Ocean City, Md., to Morehead, N. C., an area that includes the Lower Chesapeake Bay.

The advisory warned small craft to exercise continued caution and to try to stay away from the storm area.

The Miami weather bureau said that the next advisory would be issued from Washington on further progress of "Harry's Hurricane."

Another Atlantic storm was reported brewing east of Puerto Rico.

A 5 a. m. advisory from the San Juan weather bureau centered the storm about 90 miles north of San Juan.

The bureau said the winds are just barely of hurricane velocity—75 miles an hour—but are expected to increase during the next 18 hours.

The storm is moving in a west northwestward direction at a speed of about 15 miles an hour.

Small craft were warned to stay off the northeast coast of Puerto Rico and Hispanola.

Last night, the new storm was located east of Puerto Rico at latitude 19.0 north, longitude 62.5 west, about 1,300 miles southeast of Miami. Covering a radius of 60 miles with winds of 30 miles an hour, the storm was still not strong enough to be called a hurricane.

Amateur meteorologists, who named the first storm, quickly dubbed the new disturbance "Vaughan's Storm" in honor of the President's military aide. They said it had only a five percent chance of reaching the coast.

Politicians Howl After Cost Slash

Defense Chief Says Millions Saved

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—Defense Secretary Louis Johnson today ordered a sweeping reduction of 135,000 civilian jobs in the national defense setup and 250 congressmen and senators swarmed into his office to protest against the cuts.

The defense boss ordered the closing of 51 Army, Navy and Air Force installations, including 18 Air Force bases, in a move calculated to save $200 million this fiscal year.

Other bases and plants were given employment ceilings they must get under by Dec. 1, as part of the economy drive.

The legislators came to Johnson's office at his invitation. Their protests largely were aimed against defense economies in their own congressional districts.

Sen. Knowland, (R) Calif., expressing typical reaction, said that "either the Navy has not been right up to now" or else the closing of the Long Beach, Calif., shipyard is unjustified.

REP. SYKES, (D) Fla., charged that the 25 percent cut-back for Key West, Orlando and Pensacola could not be made without affecting the Navy's anti-submarine program.

Johnson vigorously defended his action before the congressional group. He said he swung the economy ax because of "my broad thesis that we want a dollar's worth of defense for every dollar Congress gives us."

Johnson said he would not "tolerate a defense WPA" among the 882,000 civilian workers now in the employ of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Johnson said the economies will save $500 million annually when they are in effect for a full year, and will contribute to a contemplated $1 billion a year saving.

The largest establishment to be closed outright is the naval shipyard at Long Beach, Calif., employing 5,800 persons. Only 400 of these employees will remain.

Pumpkin Show Brains Cooking Up New Dingwat

Whispers of a new and mysterious dingwat to be revealed during Circleville's Pumpkin Show next fall are being bruited about the city.

But there are few things the directors of the Pumpkin Show will admit about the new marvel. They admit it isn't big, neither is it little; it's not a secret to be kept forever, neither will they say anything about it.

"Too early," they mutter. "Much too early."

The directors say that guesses as to what they have in mind have ranged all the way from a new complexion cream concocted of pumpkin fuzz to a method of softening the sidewalks for those who stand and watch.

The directors are not saying these guesses are right, and they're not saying they're wrong.

Railroader Hurt In Stoutsville

A 42-year-old Zanesville railroad workman was listed in critical condition Wednesday following a railroad mishap in Stoutsville Tuesday evening.

He is Harry Fulton, who reportedly was thrown from a car on the Pennsylvania railroad as he assisted in coupling the cars together.

Pennsylvania agents in Lancaster reported that Fulton apparently had been riding on the cars as the coupling took place, but was thrown to the ground by the impact of the cars meeting. He was rushed into Lancaster hospital.

School Aid Split Widens

Chairman Opposes Special Parley

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The House Labor Committee widened its split on the federal aid to education bill when it scheduled today's formal meeting on the measure in defiance of Chairman Lesinski, (D) Mich.

The formal session was forced without Lesinski's consent when 13 members signed a petition making an open meeting mandatory. Lesinski had started close door, "round table" discussions with leading Catholic and public school educators.

Rep. Sims, (D) S. C., who sponsored the parliamentary move overriding Lesinski, conceded however that the 13 were not agreed on any compromise measure to resolve the religious controversy which has deadlocked the legislation since early May.

Other proponents of federal aid were dubious whether a quorum could be mustered to permit voting at the meeting.

ONE SIGNER of the petition, Rep. Bailey, (D) W. Va., was reported in California and members were seeking to have him fly back in time to attend the session.

The 25-member house group made an initial attempt to agree on some form of action last month but broke up in disagreement after rejecting three proposals.

They were: Delaying action until next year; approving a Senate-passed bill, and accepting a Republican-sponsored measure which would provide aid for only needy states.

It was anticipated that backers of the legislation would seek at today's meeting to amend the Senate bill sufficiently to obtain majority approval.

The Senate measure would provide $300 million annually in federal funds to aid the nation's schools and would permit each state to determine whether such funds could be used to assist Catholic and other private schools with auxiliary services such as bus transportation, non-religious textbooks and health service.

Help From Hunt Unneeded, Claim

Suspended General Tells Panel $5,000 Fee Unnecessary In Deal

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman told Senate "five percent" probes today that one of James V. Hunt's clients could have saved the $5,000 fee he paid Hunt and a lot of "grief" by dealing directly with the Army.

The suspended quartermaster general declared that the Cyclic Chemical Co. did not need Hunt's assistance to withdraw from a contract with the War Assets Administration for purchase of 850,000 aerosol bombs.

Feldman said the Army decided "long before Hunt ever came into the picture" that it wanted to recapture some 2.4 million of the bombs which had previously been declared surplus and turned over to WAA for disposal.

Appearing before the Senate investigating committee for the second day, the general said: "I'm only sorry that a representative of Cyclic Chemical didn't come to see me. I believe I could have accomplished the transaction without an intermediary if he had come to see me."

Pierre Welch, one of the heads of the company, previously testified that he had been unable to get out of the contract and finally hired Hunt for $5,000 because he was convinced a small businessman needed "pull" in Washington to get action.

Hunt intervened in the case on Aug. 22, 1947, and by night-fall of the same day WAA had released Cyclic Chemical from its contract to purchase the bombs. The firm saved some $400,000 through the action.

Meanwhile, Sen. Mundt, (R) S. D., said that he will ask Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan whether he "arranged" for precious Army planes to fly European perfume to the U. S. in 1945.

The Senate subcommittee has already established that Vaughan's good friend, John Maragon, used an Army plane for a perfume business trip to Paris.

Mundt said the subcommittee has substantially confirmed a former Air Transport Command flight sergeant's charge that two representatives of the Albert Verley Perfume Co. were accorded the same treatment as diplomats or generals on the trip.

Vaughan has said that the Verley firm paid for seven food freezers given to Mrs. Truman and high-ranking government officials.

The charge came in a letter from the sergeant to his father which was turned over to Mundt. The South Dakotan said the chief point of the charge had been confirmed by Laguardia Field customs officials.

Mundt declined to name the sergeant or the Verley representatives, and the subcommittee staff would not let newsmen see the letter. Mundt also declined to say how the sergeant was notified that the representatives were to be treated as VIPS—Very Important People.

Vaughan tentatively is scheduled to appear before the subcommittee Thursday.

Mundt said the value of the perfume flown in shortly after V-E Day was placed at two and one-half million francs and said it was transported in flasks.

He pointed out that ATC plane space at the time was at a premium for military personnel and hospital cases.

Missourian To Boss Democrats; 6 States Righters Are 'Purged'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The Democratic National Committee today unanimously elected William M. Boyle Jr. as the party chairman after ousting States' Rights committeemen from four Southern states.

The election of Boyle, a friend of President Truman's, followed swiftly the "purge" of committeemen from Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina who opposed Mr. Truman last fall.

Boyle, a 46-year-old Kansas City, Mo., attorney, succeeds J. Howard McGrath, newly named attorney general, as the Democratic chairman. The committee accepted McGrath's resignation with "deep regret."

The new party chairman, hailed by McGrath as "a great and loyal Democrat," has been executive director of the national committee for the last year.

THE COMMITTEE, at a special meeting called to elect a new national chairman, adopted by voice vote and without a fight recommendations by its credentials group that the States' Righters be dropped from the rolls.

By its action, the committee removed six Southerners who supported Gov. J. Strom Thurmond's States' Rights ticket against President Truman in the election last fall.

Those ousted from their seats on the national committee were Thurmond himself and Mrs. Albert Agnew of South Carolina, J. B. Snider and Mrs. Hermes Gauthier of Mississippi, William H. Talbot of Louisiana, and Marion Rushton of Alabama.

A brief fight developed over Committee member H. Wright Morrow of Texas, but Morrow retained his seat when the committee voted to table a motion to oust him.

An anticipated floor fight on the States' Righters failed to materialize. As the motions covering Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina were progressively read, the committee adopted them by voice vote.

Adjustment Period Faces Farmers, Brannan Says

WOOSTER, Aug. 24—U. S. Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan declared today that the buying power of farm products has fallen to the lowest point since mid-1942.

Brannan, the principal speaker at the state conservation field days and plowing matches at the Apple Creek state school farm near Wooster, told visiting farmers that "agriculture faces a somewhat uncertain situation." He said: "Farm net income has been declining for a year and a half.

This, then, is a period of adjustment. It is a time in which agriculture needs adequate, realistic and efficient farm programs."

Brannan injected his proposed commodity support program which he said would keep prices at a "realistic level." The secretary said the farmers would gain more purchasing power than they had had in the last ten years. He outlined his proposed program:

"IN 1950, under my proposal, prices would be supported at levels which would give farmers as much buying power as they averaged from 1939 through 1948. This income floor would be a goal of slightly more than $26 billion—about 15 percent less than last year's dollar income—and about equal to the purchasing power that agriculture had in 1942."

Brannan defended his plan by denying it was a "proposal to guarantee farm income."

The agriculture secretary predicted a change-over of farm production to livestock raising. However, he contended that the shift to livestock production would take longer than expected and maintained that it would be necessary to support it with an adapted production and price-adjustment program.

Thursday Marks No Noise Day

Thursday is N (no-noise) day. It is the day when Circleville police have promised to begin cracking down on unnecessary vehicular noises on the streets of the city, according to Police Chief William McCready.

Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff also is expected to resume his war against unmuffled engine noises. To date he has arrested two drivers of heavy trucks for operating the vehicles without mufflers in proper working order.

Truman Signs Famous North Atlantic Pact

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—President Truman today formally brought the North Atlantic Pact into force, and in doing so hailed the mutual defense agreement as a "momentous" move to preserve world peace.

The pact became effective as the President signed a proclamation at the White House after receiving the final instrument of ratification from the Republic of France.

Mr. Truman scrawled a bold "Harry S. Truman" across the bottom of an illuminated document, and what has been hailed as the most important defense step ever taken by the United States in peacetime became a fact.

It was the culmination of 14 months of diplomatic and legislative endeavor which had its beginning in the Vandenberg resolution of the 80th Congress.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and the envoys of the North Atlantic Pact nations were at the President's elbow as he sat at his desk in the White House oval office and firmly implanted his signature on the historic document.

SUPPORT PLAN DEFENDED

Adjustment Period Faces Farmers, Brannan Says

WOOSTER, Aug. 24—U. S. Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan declared today that the buying power of farm products has fallen to the lowest point since mid-1942.

Brannan, the principal speaker at the state conservation field days and plowing matches at the Apple Creek state school farm near Wooster, told visiting farmers that "agriculture faces a somewhat uncertain situation." He said: "Farm net income has been declining for a year and a half.

This, then, is a period of adjustment. It is a time in which agriculture needs adequate, realistic and efficient farm programs."

Brannan injected his proposed commodity support program which he said would keep prices at a "realistic level." The secretary said the farmers would gain more purchasing power than they had had in the last ten years. He outlined his proposed program:

"IN 1950, under my proposal, prices would be supported at levels which would give farmers as much buying power as they averaged from 1939 through 1948. This income floor would be a goal of slightly more than $26 billion—about 15 percent less than last year's dollar income—and about equal to the purchasing power that agriculture had in 1942."

Brannan defended his plan by denying it was a "proposal to guarantee farm income."

The agriculture secretary predicted a change-over of farm production to livestock raising. However, he contended that the shift to livestock production would take longer than expected and maintained that it would be necessary to support it with an adapted production and price-adjustment program.

Thursday Marks No Noise Day

Thursday is N (no-noise) day. It is the day when Circleville police have promised to begin cracking down on unnecessary vehicular noises on the streets of the city, according to Police Chief William McCrady.

Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff also is expected to resume his war against unmuffled engine noises. To date he has arrested two drivers of heavy trucks for operating the vehicles without mufflers in proper working order.

Truman Signs Famous North Atlantic Pact

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—President Truman today formally brought the North Atlantic Pact into force, and in doing so hailed the mutual defense agreement as a "momentous" move to preserve world peace.

The pact became effective as the President signed a proclamation at the White House after receiving the final instrument of ratification from the Republic of France.

Mr. Truman scrawled a bold "Harry S. Truman" across the bottom of an illuminated document, and what has been hailed as the most important defense step ever taken by the United States in peacetime became a fact.

It was the culmination of 14 months of diplomatic and legislative endeavor which had its beginning in the Vandenberg resolution of the 80th Congress.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and the envoys of the North Atlantic Pact nations were at the President's elbow as he sat at his desk in the White House oval office and firmly implanted his signature on the historic document.

THIS WAS THE only shipyard ordered closed, but a long list of others will be reduced. Johnson's order called for the reduction of 238 personnel at the Columbus General Distribution Depot, 842 at Wright-Patterson Field, 476 at the Wilmington all-weather flying base. Completely inactivated was the medical section of the Columbus depot. This latter is to be effective Dec. 31. The reductions are expected to save $500 million in the current fiscal year, and to provide the basis for a billion-dollar annual cut in defense spending by July 1, 1950.

Some members of the Senate and House plan to confer with Johnson on the effect of the personnel cuts on their districts.

Johnson, it was learned, has advised congressmen from districts particularly affected that he will be in his Pentagon office and ready to receive their protests.

Chairman Tydings, (D) Md., and Rep. Vinson, (D) Ga., of the Senate and House Armed Services Committees, also were expected to attend or send representatives to Johnson's office.

Johnson's decision to act was made despite the fact that the $14 billion military appropriation, for the current fiscal year, has not yet passed the Senate.

Commissioners Study County Ditch Projects

A new hearing on a petition to clean and straighten the Clements ditch in Perry Township has been set for Oct. 3 by Pickaway County commissioners. The new meeting was scheduled after a hearing Tuesday in which it was decided to change the course of the ditch. The commissioners ordered the county engineer to revise the plans and assessments accordingly.

The commissioners also viewed the Mowser ditch in Perry Township to determine whether a cleaning and straightening project should be undertaken by the county. No date has been set for hearing yet.

Cost of the projects is to be borne by the landowners.

Separate Water Meters Going To Vets' Home

Installation of separate water meters for veterans housing units over Pickaway County garage on West High street is almost completed.

The meters were ordered installed by the county commissioners after they compared bills for the garage over two quarters. A bill for January, February and March totalled $61.55. The next quarter, April, May and June, the total had jumped to $81.

The commissioners thought this too large a sum for the county to pay for water for the seven apartments. The bills covered water used by the county garage as well as the apartment dwellers. One meter served all.

Two Estates Are Appraised

An appraisal of the estate of Margaret S. Smith has been filed in Pickaway County probate court. Net value is listed at $3,505.11, of which $832.25 is in personal goods and chattels, $40.82 in cash, $2,582 in bonds, notes and other securities, and $50 in accounts receivable.

Also filed in probate court was an appraisal of the Clara C. Dresbach estate listing net total value at $24,899.07, of which $325 is in personal goods and chattels, $14,327.23 in bonds, notes and other securities, $246.84 in accounts receivable and other credits, and $10,000 in real estate.

Martin Indicted For Murder In Franklin County

A 33-year-old former Millport ex-convict was indicted for first degree murder by Franklin County grand jury Tuesday.

He is Cecil "Red" Martin, who admitted slaying Theodore White, his 58-year-old "drinking companion," and burying his body in a shallow grave along Little Walnut creek last June.

White's body was discovered by a group of Ashville youngsters who had been swimming in the creek, and Martin was traced through the slain man's auto.

Martin reportedly confessed to fatally striking White in White's Columbus apartment, bundling the body into a car and taking it to the banks of Little Walnut creek, where he scooped out a shallow grave for the dead man.

The ex-con was paroled from Ohio Penitentiary in January after serving nine and a half years for armed robbery. Eight witnesses testified against Martin during the grand jury probe Tuesday.

Drunken Driving Count Lodged Against Autoist

A 44-year-old Columbus man caused state highway patrolmen and sheriff's deputies more than their share of grief Wednesday morning.

Deputy Sheriff Verne Pontius said he received a call early Wednesday that a car had struck another vehicle on Route 23 north of Circleville and had failed to stop.

Pontius said they found the car described over the phone parked at Little Walnut, took the keys and travelled up the road to try to find the scene of the accident. He said he was unable to find anyone who had seen the accident and that there was no trace of any accident.

"The car was marked as if it had been in a recent scrape, however," Pontius said.

Meanwhile, State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells had been alerted about the call, and proceeded to Little Walnut to take the Columbus into custody.

The man will answer accusations of drunken driving in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

Jackson Hires Home Ec Tutor

Miss Kathryn Bower of Kingston Route 1 has been employed as home economics and biological sciences teacher in Jackson Township school.

George D. McDowell, county superintendent of schools, said the Jackson board of education employed Miss Bower to replace Mrs. Carl Schafer, who resigned to devote her time to home life.

Miss Bower was trained in Ohio State university and will begin her first year of teaching this Fall, McDowell said.

ach," Wheelwright brought his activated daughter to the Leeds Dispensary, where Janet proceeded to enliven things by singing and reciting. When other kids in the nursery echoed her performance, the weary nurses and doctors gave her a sedative.

An hour later the baby was wide awake and at it again. This time the doctors sent Janet home, advising her parents that she was suffering no harm and would be all right when the effects of the tablets wore off.

West Virginia Would Have You Know They Have Several Righteous Beefs

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 24—The citizens of West Virginia, a proud and prosperous people, have several righteous beefs against outlanders who come here expecting the population to be composed entirely of hillbillies who have a git-tar in one hand and a still in the back forty.

In particular, they are no longer amused by two standard queries which have worn thin in recent years. They are kinda huffy nowadays with persons who say:

(1) "Take off your shoes, Joe, and be comfortable. You don't need to wear 'em just because I'm here." And

(2) "Where's your clay pipe, Granny?"

For the most part, West Virginians have been wearing shoes for two-three generations now, and it is the exceptional citizen who still walks as if his feet hurt in leather.

AND IN THE second instance, West Virginia belles switched from Prince Albert and cut plug to coffin nails a full generation ago.

As for the still in the pasture, there may be no excuse for it in other sections of this state. But the people of Charleston are almost impelled to brush their teeth in home-made bourbon. Turn on a faucet in this town marked "gold" and what comes gushing forth is eau de chlorine.

It is as repugnant and generally repulsive as the health-giving waters served up as cure-alls in European and American spas.

Such waters are labelled healthy because if you can swallow a glass of 'em and keep 'em down, it certainly proves you are healthy.

The drinking water here is so generally offensive that some far-sighted citizens are considering bottling it and putting it on the market as a life-giving elixir.

The visitor to this city is forced to choose between dehydration and a glass of frog from which a stand of mint is not infrequently growing.

West Virginians suffer from another frustration, too. When they venture beyond the borders of their own beautiful state, and people say "where you from," the proud native carols "West Virginia."

INEVITABLY, someone in the crowd says "my lands, then you must know my mother's cousin once removed, Scarlett Culpepper, in Richmond."

That's when the feudin' and the fightin' start. Nothing riles a West Virginian more than the outlanders' vague but fixed belief that West Virginia is just a feudal fief of Virginia, that Richmond is also its capital and everyone is kissin' kin.

As a matter of record, West Virginia just failed to get under the wire as the fourteenth colony along about 1776 through the general cantankerousness and bull-headedness of George III.

The papers were on the royal desk, waiting to be signed, when the diplomatic pouch arrived with word that the colonists in the New World had started the Revolutionary War. George, always short-sighted and hot-tempered, threw the pen down and refused to make his mark.

The citizens of Charleston, the capital of the state, have an additional cross. Seems like people all over the USA are convinced there is only one Charleston in the nation, a little, ol', bitty seaport, in a little, ol' bitty state known as South Carolina.

When residents of Charleston, visit the outer world and announce that they are from Charleston, they no sooner get the word out of their rosebud mouths than some idiot burlies: "Such a lovely ole town! Such divine old colonial homes. And, my dear, such truly wonderful magnolia gardens!"

Well, Sir, this is the sort of thing that makes strong men weep and weak women weaker. And there doesn't seem to be a darn thing that any one can do about it!

14 Youngsters Advance Into Marching Band

Fourteen youngsters have been advanced into Circleville high school's senior marching band prior to football season this Fall.

Truman Eberly, director of the band, said he expects to have a full band of more than 60 pieces this year, along with the drum major and majorettes.

Advancing into the senior group are Theresa Hill and Sally Eshelman, flutes; Carol Terry, Nancy Eitel and Shirley Mason, clarinets; Donna Kerns, tenor saxophone; Elmer Winner, trumpet; Donna Ferguson and Jo Ellen Good, trombones; George Troutman Jr., James Brown and Dorothy Lampson, baritone; Frederick Cooper, bass horn; and Wayne Smith, drums.

Eberly pointed out that his clarinet section will be larger following football season since four of the drum majorettes are clarinet players.

First practice for the 1949-50 year will be held in the high school at 7 p. m. Friday, Eberly said. Pre-football rehearsals will be divided into playing and marching sessions.

Send these cards to friends in other states... have the children collect them as an educational hobby! They are truly collectors' items... chosen from color photographs taken by leading photographers!

HOCKING PARKS... Hocking County, near South Bloomingville. A natural wonderland of spectacular beauty! Picturesque caves, canyons, gorges, cliffs and towering waterfalls. Excellent picnicking and camping facilities.

Let's Explore Ohio!

Ohio has been the parade ground of many different peoples... the prehistoric Mound Builders with their puzzling earthworks, forts and shrines... the early pioneers who braved the wilderness and the enemy... and the busy, industrious Ohioans of today.

Because of the invincible desire for freedom and security of our ancestors, we now have a state which is strong, healthy and free. Here is magnificent scenery... here is well-balanced wealth of agriculture, manufacturing, mining and commerce. It's a great state!

This summer let's explore those places which make Ohio rich in heritage, adorned in beauty. They can increase your appreciation of the past and refresh your hope for the future.

The STANDARD OIL Co. (OHIO)

WONDERFUL FISHING...

Hundreds of lovely lakes and beautiful streams provide fine fishing in Ohio. Every county has at least two different types of game fish! Why not try your luck this summer?

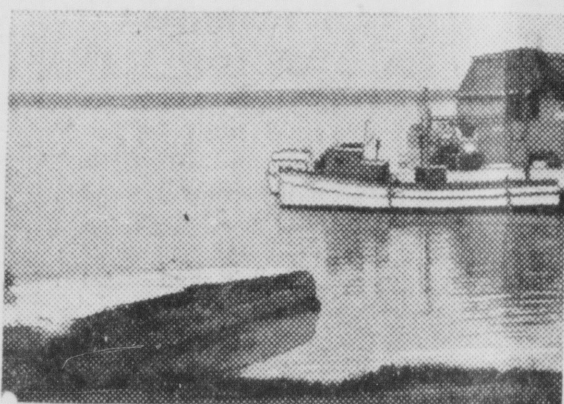

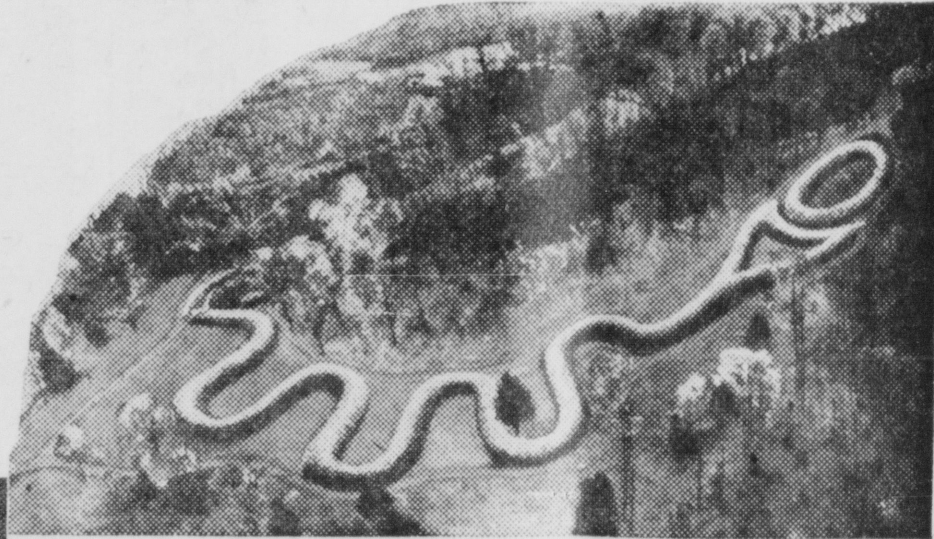

SERPENT MOUND...

16 miles southeast of Hillsboro on Route 73. A world-famous and mysterious mound enclosed within a state park reveals a serpent 1,335 feet in length! The head of the serpent seems to be reaching for a huge egg-shaped mound. Within the park are excellent facilities for picnicking and camping.

OUR HOUSE...

at Gallipolis. You'll enjoy this gracious old tavern and community center of colonial days. Now a museum of early Americana enclosing interesting mementos and furnishings of the early French settlers. It has been restored exactly as it was in 1825 when Lafayette visited there. Open daily, 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.; Sunday, 1:00 to 5:00 P.M. Admission 25¢.

KELLEYS ISLAND...

off the coast of northwest Ohio. A wonderful vacation land! You'll find fine fishing, boating, and swimming. Restful and quiet, mostly rural. Inscription Rock, shown above, is one of the finest examples of Indian pictograph work in America.

GETTING IN THE FUEL

IN SPITE of modern improvements there are still many places in this country where wood is the winter fuel. The farmer's wealth is measured by the length of his summer woodpile. In those regions gold and jewels mean little—nothing counts but wood. The thrifty farmer cuts woods whenever other duties are not pressing. He fells the tree, then saws it into lengths, chops the lengths and lets them lie in a heap to dry. Later he hauls the wood home and the youngsters pile it neatly. Having a two-year woodpile is a sign of foresight and industry.

In cities there is coal, there is oil, there is gas. The individual citizen has little control over his gas supply. It comes into the pipes and out the burners at the turn of the cocks. He has a little more control of his fuel oil and can have as large storage tanks as his community ordinances will let him. The more he himself can store, the safer he is against shortage. If everything is full when the cold begins, he is doing well. If every oil user starts with tanks full, the oil companies can stock a greater reserve.

Coal users, they say, have been lax lately about keeping bins filled. But now is the time to stock up and be ready. Even John L. Lewis has less power to hurt people whose bins are filled. The sooner the better.

RHETT AND SCARLETT

THE WORLD will never know whether Rhett Butler came back to Scarlett O'Hara. This becomes one more of the great literary questions, along with Frank R. Stockton's poser of many years ago: "The Lady or the Tiger?". Of the millions who have read the late Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," most have hoped that some day she would yield to pressure and write a sequel, solving the mystery. She steadily refused, and when asked whether Rhett and Scarlett were ever reunited, said, "I don't know."

The immense sales of the novel made it an American Institution, a book to be found in every library, just as once were "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Ben Hur." These and "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" have become integral parts of the national tradition. Could Margaret Mitchell have added to the number in a later book? We shall never know, as we shall never know about Rhett and Scarlett.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The difficulty about the Ober Act in Maryland and the Feinberg Act in New York is that disloyalty is hard to establish in a free society. Opposition is not disloyalty. Was it disloyal to the United States for the Democratic national committee to establish a smear machine to malign the character and destroy the political personality of Herbert Hoover who was then actually President of the United States? Was the opposition to Franklin D. Roosevelt's policy of appeasement at Tehran and Yalta disloyalty to the United States? Is opposition to Harry Truman's bankrupting Fair Deal—the inventions of such men as Leon Keyserling and Oscar Ewing—disloyalty to the United States?

The fact is that opposition is essential to our form of government which recognizes freedom of debate and discussion. Therefore, the various leftwing elements, from the opportunistic ADA to the Communists, feel that they are as loyal as anyone else. The problem posed then is to define loyalty, which, in a free society, is very difficult.

It used to be quite clear. It did not matter what one thought or said or wrote: To prove disloyalty, there had to be an overt act, something specific, discernible and measurable. But how are we to measure the corruption of young children in schools? By what instruments are we to gauge the effects of word and gesture on the young mind? For instance, if constantly, like water wearing a stone, the idea is projected that patriotism is an ugly vice, that only old-fogies, reactionaries, Fascists love their country but good and understanding people love the world—how is a patriotic generation to be reared?

Or take, for instance, the constant projection of the idea that man is an animal conditioned by his environment and controlled solely by material, accidental causes—what does that do to the child's concept of moral law upon which our civilization is based? A nation that departs widely from its civilization may be destroyed by a challenging civilization, if the capacity of its people to resist has been destroyed.

In opposition to the Feinberg Act in New York state, an act which forbids Communists to teach in our schools, Rose Russell, legislative representative of the teachers union CIO, makes the point:

"Our citizens must protect their schools. Specifically with regard to the Feinberg law; we must demand that the board of regents not follow the unAmerican procedure of the attorney-general, but provide due process safeguards for any organization which it contemplates putting on a list as 'subversive'."

"We must insist on full encouragement for free inquiry for teacher and student."

"Our schools are indeed in danger. Not from Communists, or Communism—whether broadly or narrowly defined—but from those who, in the guise of combating Communism, are effectively smothering intellectual freedom and stifling education with the very regimentation and totalitarianism they pretend to oppose."

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

"THE TRICK"

"Chris," Terry, "is not to let anyone know we're penniless. Otherwise fewer, if any, invitations. Inexpensive, charming couples are a dime a dozen. At that, even well heeled, and I use the word advisedly, we are not so valuable a property from the hostesses' standpoint as when we were unmarried and apparently so eligible. Still, any good hostess can always use us."

Terry was very pale. Her voice shook when she spoke. She said, "I do feel very odd."

"Delayed shock," He came over to sit beside her. "Put your head down," he ordered.

"I'm not going to faint!" "Down on my shoulder. There..." She said, "Chris, I have some assets. The pearls, my emerald ring. My mother's antique jewelry is of little intrinsic value, I suppose, but there are my furs, and"—her voice began to go out of control—"my engagement ring."

"That," said Chris, "has been in hook, not for the first time. With an eye to the future, I always got it out when I could. I had my father's evening studs, so I sold them. Dick Johnson has showered me with gifts, a set of studs among them, and his parents gave me a watch. I still have those. I sold my cigarette case too."

Terry spoke, low: "I don't want to sell my things. I can't bear to. You see, I've never cared much about jewelry. My father gave me other things instead, except the emerald and the pearls. And because he gave me those and I was permitted to keep them, I thought I'd starve before I'd ever sell them."

"Maybe you will, then. You mustn't sell them, Terry. The hell of this situation is, we have to keep up the facade, have to trim the Christmas tree, have to illuminate the legend. Therefore, we can't borrow, nor can one of our emeralds be suddenly missing."

Terry drew away from him. She said slowly, "I was very honest with Helen, and it appalled her. She said so. It didn't me. I had no talents, and no grim do-or-die character traits. It didn't seem very reprehensible to me to believe that someday, in the environment I was determined to keep, I would meet a man I could love and marry."

"Same here," said Chris; "substituting a girl I could love. Well, we have that."

Terry looked at him. She asked, "Just what have we, Chris?"

"Youth," he replied promptly. "good looks—beauty in your case, personality in mine." He laughed, his eyes very blue. "And, if I may say so, a terrific amount of nerve. We can see it through. We can coast. I know all the angles, and you can learn. Then we'll go out to the Islands." He paused and added, "Uncle Hugo is quite a character. He is of another world and generation. But he's always had an eye, properly downcast, for the ladies. When he married he chose double security. Aunt Cordelia is no beauty. So, I have an idea you could charm dear Hugo. And if you do—"

"Suppose he insists that you go to work?" she interrupted.

"He'll be right," he said. "I'll be right," he said. "I'll be right," he said.

"I'll be right," he said. "I'll be right," he said. "I'll be right," he said.

Bennett Cerf's

Try, Stop Me

In London, shortly before the war began, the literary set turned out en masse for a banquet in honor of a distinguished American publisher, just then winding up his twenty-fifth annual visit to the shores of Albion.

Numerous British luminaries felt that the occasion demanded elaborate expressions of esteem for the guest of honor, but, while they went on and on, orating, the subject of their encomiums unfortunately went on and on imbibing whiskies and soda. When he finally was called upon to speak himself, only a herculean effort enabled him to get to his feet. He swayed dizzily, blinked at his audience, and suddenly remarked very clearly, "Gentlemen, as I was saying—" With this he sat down and promptly fell asleep.

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

Sir Stafford Cripps' Sept. 6 visit is badly timed. He should have been advised that after Labor Day Americans have nothing left but mosquito bites and a lingering trace of tan.

The best time to get us is after February when the Christmas bills are paid and before Decoration Day, when we start reading vacation literature.

We understand Sir Stafford is coming over in person because of the FCC ruling against giving away anything over the telephone.

Right now it looks like we have lost another $4 billion popularity contest in Britain but it's not difficult to understand their point of view. No American ever has fallen in love with his biggest creditor either.

But things are so tough in Britain they have generals who are accepting deep freezers.

The biggest giveaway of all time though was in Yugoslavia when Tito gave away Stalin.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mrs. Dionne

NEW YORK—It has been 15 years since the word came from the town of Callander, Ontario, that a country doctor, working carefully and surely, had delivered five girls to a Mrs. Oliva Dionne in a small farm home, and it is of that remarkable event that you cannot help thinking as the taxi weaves its way in and out of the uptown traffic on two wheels.

You are headed for Misericordia hospital up on East 86th Street, there to pick up this same Mrs. Dionne and two nuns making a religious pilgrimage to Lourdes and Rome, and since you have never met before, you wonder what she is like, what the 15 years may have done to her and how this greatest of cities affects her.

You tell the cab driver to wait and then you go upstairs and wait yourself, for five minutes or so, while a perspiring reporter explains sadly how he had tried to get her to go up to the Bronx to see the Collins quadruplets but how she didn't have time, what with Mrs. Dionne needing to make the 4 p. m. sailing of the Mauretania.

Then the three of them come down the hall, the celebrated mother big and hearty and smiling a small and calm smile, and the two nuns—much littler and much more excited. They say goodbye to friends they have been visiting. You pile into the waiting cab and the nuns tell you they are Mother Marie and Sister Almee, of the Quebec Sisters of the Assumption. Because they are who and what they are, they don't bother to be blasé or indifferent about their travels but frankly admit how wonderful it all is, Mother Marie in English that is larded heavily with a French accent and Sister Almee in a quite impeccable English.

The cab heads downtown and you are disappointed to learn that Mrs. Dionne speaks only French. You don't even bother to try out your night-school version of that language, but use the sisters as interpreters. However, things like that always are so unsatisfactory.

Does Mrs. Dionne like New York? Ah, yes. Very much? Well, better, say, than Chicago. And has she been here before? Yes, several times. What was it she liked especially about New York? Oh, wondrous things—the stores, the shops, you know.

Every now and then you look at Mrs. Dionne directly as you ask the sisters the questions in English, and she just beams back with that uncertain air that anyone has when he doesn't quite know what's going on.

GETTING IN THE FUEL

IN SPITE of modern improvements there are still many places in this country where wood is the winter fuel. The farmer's wealth is measured by the length of his summer woodpile. In those regions gold and jewels mean little—nothing counts but wood. The thrifty farmer cuts woods whenever other duties are not pressing. He fells the tree, then saws it into lengths, chops the lengths and lets them lie in a heap to dry. Later he hauls the wood home and the youngsters pile it neatly. Having a two-year woodpile is a sign of foresight and industry.

In cities there is coal, there is oil, there is gas. The individual citizen has little control over his gas supply. It comes into the pipes and out the burners at the turn of the cocks. He has a little more control of his fuel oil and can have as large storage tanks as his community ordinances will let him. The more he himself can store, the safer he is against shortage. If everything is full when the cold begins, he is doing well. If every oil user starts with tanks full, the oil companies can stock a greater reserve.

Coal users, they say, have been lax lately about keeping bins filled. But now is the time to stock up and be ready. Even John L. Lewis has less power to hurt people whose bins are filled. The sooner the better.

RHETT AND SCARLETT

THE WORLD will never know whether Rhett Butler came back to Scarlett O'Hara. This becomes one more of the great literary questions, along with Frank R. Stockton's poser of many years ago: "The Lady or the Tiger?". Of the millions who have read the late Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," most have hoped that some day she would yield to pressure and write a sequel, solving the mystery. She steadily refused, and when asked whether Rhett and Scarlett were ever reunited, said, "I don't know."

The immense sales of the novel made it an American institution, a book to be found in every library, just as once were "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Ben Hur." These and "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" have become integral parts of the national tradition. Could Margaret Mitchell have added to the number in a later book? We shall never know, as we shall never know about Rhett and Scarlett.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The difficulty about the Ober Act in Maryland and the Feinberg Act in New York is that disloyalty is hard to establish in a free society. Opposition is not disloyalty. Was it disloyal to the United States for the Democratic national committee to establish a smear machine to malign the character and destroy the political personality of Herbert Hoover who was then actually President of the United States? Was the opposition to Franklin D. Roosevelt's policy of appeasement at Teheran and Yalta disloyalty to the United States? Is opposition to Harry Truman's bankrupting Fair Deal—the inventions of such men as Leon Keyserling and Oscar Ewing—disloyalty to the United States?

The fact is that opposition is essential to our form of government which recognizes freedom of debate and discussion. Therefore, the various leftwing elements, from the opportunistic ADA to the Communists, feel that they are as loyal as anyone else. The problem posed then is to define loyalty, which, in a free society, is very difficult.

It used to be quite clear. It did not matter what one thought or said or wrote: To prove disloyalty, there had to be an overt act, something specific, discernible and measurable. But how are we to measure the corruption of young children in schools? By what instruments are we to gauge the effects of word and gesture on the young mind? For instance, if constantly, like water wearing a stone, the idea is projected that patriotism is an ugly vice, that only old-fogies, reactionaries, Fascists love their country but good and understanding people love the world—how is a patriotic generation to be reared?

Or take, for instance, the constant projection of the idea that man is an animal conditioned by his environment and controlled solely by material, accidental causes—what does that do to the child's concept of moral law upon which our civilization is based? A nation that departs widely from its civilization may be destroyed by a challenging civilization, if the capacity of its people to resist has been destroyed.

In opposition to the Feinberg Act in New York state, an act which forbids Communists to teach in our schools, Rose Russell, legislative representative of the teachers union CIO, makes the point:

"Our citizens must protect their schools. Specifically with regard to the Feinberg law; we must demand that the board of regents not follow the unAmerican procedure of the attorney-general, but provide due process safeguards for any organization which it contemplates putting on a list as 'subversive'."

"We must insist on full encouragement for free inquiry for teacher and student."

"Our schools are indeed in danger. Not from Communists, or Communism—whether broadly or narrowly defined—but from those who, in the guise of combating Communism, are effectively smothering intellectual freedom and stifling education with the very regimentation and totalitarianism they pretend to oppose."

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

"THE TRICK," Chris warned Terry, "is not to let anyone know we're penniless. Otherwise fewer, if any, invitations, inpecunious, charming couples are a dime a dozen. At that, even well heeled, and I use the word advisedly, we are not so valuable a property from the hostesses' standpoint as when we were unmarried and apparently so eligible. Still, any good hostess can always use us."

Terry was very pale. Her voice shook when she spoke. She said, "I do feel very odd."

"Delayed shock," He came over to sit beside her. "Put your head down," he ordered.

"I'm not going to faint!" "Down on my shoulder. There..." She said, "Chris, I have some assets. The pearls, my emerald ring. My mother's antique jewelry is of little intrinsic value, I suppose, but there are my furs, and"—her voice began to go out of control—"my engagement ring."

"That," said Chris, "has been in hock, not for the first time. With an eye to the future, I always got it out when I could. I had my father's diving studs, so I sold them. Dick Johnson has showered me with gifts—a set of studs among them, and his parents gave me a watch. I still have those. I sold my cigarette case too."

Terry spoke, low: "I don't want to sell my things. I can't bear to. You see, I've never cared much about jewelry. My father gave me other things instead, except the emerald and the pearls. And because he gave me those and I was permitted to keep them, I thought I'd starve before I'd ever sell them."

"Maybe you will, then. You mustn't sell them, Terry. The hell of this situation is, we have to keep up the facade, have to trim the Christmas tree, have to illuminate the legend. Therefore, we can't borrow, nor can one of our emeralds be suddenly missing."

Terry drew away from him. She said slowly, "I was very honest with Helen, and it appalled her. She said so. It didn't me. I had no talents, and no grim do-or-die character traits. It didn't seem very reprehensible to me to believe that someday, in the environment I was determined to keep, I would meet a man I could love and marry."

"Same here," said Chris; "substituting a girl I could love. Well, we have that."

Terry looked at him. She asked, "Just what have we, Chris?"

"Youth," he replied promptly. "good looks—beauty in your case, personality in mine." He laughed, his eyes very blue. "And, if I may say so, a terrific amount of nerve. We can see it through. We can coast. I know all the angles, and you can learn. Then we'll go out to the Islands." He paused and added, "Uncle Hugo is quite a character. He is of another world and generation. But he's always had an eye, properly downcast, for the ladies. When he married he chose double security. Aunt Cordelia is no beauty. So, I have an idea you could charm dear Hugo. And if you do—"

"Suppose he insists that you go to work?" she interrupted.

"Why should I," he asked lazily, "with a rich wife?" He bent to kiss her cheek, just at the corner of her mouth. "Uncle Hugo prefers to dispose of his mortal holdings where there is already a holding, so to speak. He might not leave money to an improvident nephew, but his nephew's wife is another matter... Why do you draw away?"

"I have no patience with either of us," she said.

"Of course not. I should be out looking for a job and a cold-water flat; you should be out looking for a job too. Terry, do you love me?"

"I'm in love with you, Chris. You don't get over that from one minute to the next," she said slowly.

"But you fell in love with a different man, didn't you? He looked just like me, but wasn't." "Perhaps so. And the same holds true for you. You fell in love with Mark Austin's daughter. You didn't know about Mark Austin then. We couldn't detach each other from our backgrounds, so we fell in love with the backgrounds too. Chris, if you'd known, what would you have done?"

"Run away. One look at you, that day, and I would have smelled danger. I wouldn't even have stayed for dinner, darling, and you wouldn't have seen me again."

She said, "And if I had known I wouldn't have wanted to—that is, even if I had wanted to, I wouldn't have."

"What remains?" He asked, after a moment.

"We're married, Chris, and—we are in love." She waited. "Aren't we?"

He caught her close and kissed her. "It's sad and absurd, and it serves us both right, but we are, we are!"

She thought that, shorn of what she had termed background, love was something else again; it was no longer that of legend and the fairy tale, it was honest and sharp, it saw the flaws and the weaknesses, and admitted the strong, compelling pull of an almost frightening physical attraction.

He said, "Okay, so we'll make a bargain. Play it my way for a while, Terry, and see what happens. If another man comes into the picture, the sort of man you thought I was, I'll bow out gracefully."

"That goes for me too," she said, her heart tight and sorrowful, imagining it. "If there's another woman..."

"Shake," said Chris, and held out his hand.

She put her own in it. It was very cold, and he held it hard. He said, "But there's the gimmick, remember. We have to be in love—again, you with the unknown gentleman, blast him, and me with the hypothetical heiress."

"Of course."

"Not of course. One rarely risks an illusion the second time. But we, we are different. Crazy, both of us." He released her, rose, went over to the desk, looked at the money, and turned out his own pockets. He asked thought-so, while a perspiring reporter explains sadly how he had tried to get her to go up to the Bronx to see the Collins quadruplets but how she didn't have time, what with Mrs. Dionne needing to make the 4 p. m. sailing of the Mauretania.

Then the three of them came down the hall, the celebrated mother big and hearty and smiling a small and calm smile, and the two nuns—much littler and much more excited. They say goodbye to friends they have been visiting. You pile into the waiting cab and the nuns tell you they are Mother Marie and Sister Aimee, of the Quebec Sisters of the Assumption. Because they are who and what they are, they don't bother to be blasé or indifferent about their travels but frankly admit how wonderful it all is, Mother Marie in English that is larded heavily with a French accent and Sister Aimee in a quite impeccable English.

The cab heads downtown and you are disappointed to learn that Mrs. Dionne speaks only French. You don't even bother to try out your night-school version of that language, but use the sisters as interpreters. However, things like that always are so unsatisfactory.

Does Mrs. Dionne like New York? Ah, yes. Very much? Well, better, say, than Chicago. And has she been here before? Yes, several times. What was it like especially about New York? Oh, women things—the stores, the shops, you know.

Every now and then you look at Mrs. Dionne directly as you ask the sisters the questions in English, and she just beams back with that uncertain air that anyone has when he doesn't quite know what's going on.

YOU HAVE INSTRUCTED THE CABBIE to take it a little easier than usual as he tears hell for leather toward Grand Central Terminal to pick up their baggage before heading west to the river, but his memory is short and soon he is back in the old mile-a-minute groove.

You watch Sister Aimee look a little apprehensively and clutch the side strap, and even Mother Marie, the older, eyes the whizzing traffic dubiously, but Mrs. Dionne just sits there and relaxes.

She has come a long way from the small frame house in Callander and she has been a great many places she undoubtedly never dreamed of having been, and a cab ride through New York's streets is just one more event in a life that has already had the grand event.

The cab stops briefly at Grand Central and you see about having a porter bring up the baggage and you light a cigarette and talk with the cabbie, telling him just who it is he's driving. He nods, matter-of-factly. Cabbies don't impress easily. You ask him about celebrities he's driven.

"Lindbergh," he says, nodding in pleasant reminiscence. "He was the biggest. The biggest and the best. A plain man and a big one. I never carried a better man." Then the baggage comes and you head across town in the direction of the Cunard pier at 50th Street. The Queen Mary has come in, you note as you near the pier, and just down the waterfront 100 feet is the French liner De Grasse, and you think speculatively that you never have seen so many pieces of loose baggage, disheveled trans-Atlantic passengers or perspiring baggage men in your life.

You herd your charges into an elevator and then, upstairs, you steer them through the red-tape, the passport-showings, etc., and lead them up the gangplank and into the side of the Mauretania.

YOU NOTICE, A LITTLE AMAZED, that Mrs. Dionne's calm remains untroubled and that Sister Aimee and Mother Marie are not far behind her, and you look around at the other passengers, fluttering uncertainly and excitedly around from porter to purser to steward, and wonder how people can be so different.

"Perhaps we should go down to our stateroom right away, to be there when the baggage comes," Sister Aimee suggests, but just as you are about to agree, the news photographers come and you all head topside for some pictures on deck.

Mother Marie eyes the De Grasse, as the cameramen begin focusing, and you whisper to her how fine it would be if she could make the trip on the Mauretania and visit the De Grasse every mealtime because of the French cuisine, and she grins appreciatively.

The cameramen ask Mother Marie to point off to the horizon, as if in the general direction of France, and she does so, but if you follow her black-gloved finger, it actually is aimed at a soap factory in New Jersey.

The photographers take them from every angle, Mrs. Dionne patient, calm and non-committal, and finally it is all over and you take them below to their stateroom.

You get them settled and you bid them au revoir, and at the French phrase, Mrs. Dionne's eyes light up for an instant. Then you are back on deck and leaving the ship, and all the way across town you wonder what the big, hearty woman thinks of as she sits there

Proposed Women's Club Combine Constitution Submitted For Approval

House Panel Facing Task

Representatives of 11 Circleville women's clubs met in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening to discuss the formation of the proposed organization, the Circleville Association of Women's Clubs.

With Mrs. Sterling Poling, temporary chairman, presiding and Mrs. Irma Stevenson serving as secretary pro tem, the club delegates discussed a constitution submitted to the group by an organizing committee elected at a previous meeting held in June. Serving on the organizing committee were Miss Rose Good, Mrs. Charles May, Mrs. A. J. Lyle, Mrs. Fred Grant and Mrs. Joe Bell.

Club delegates agreed to submit the constitution to their individual clubs for approval and report at the next meeting to be held Sept. 27, in the rooms of the Business and Professional Women's Club in Masonic Temple.

It was felt by club delegates at the Tuesday meeting that a majority of clubs would be able to take final action prior to the September meeting.

By October, all clubs should be able to elect representatives to the association, who will in turn elect permanent officers. These will appoint a house committee having one member from each organization making up the association.

The house committee will take on the task first of house hunting on a limited budget, and then of paying monthly bills and keeping the house in order for the women's clubs which will use it.

Mrs. Poling reported: "It is not now known whether the association will be able to immediately finance the purchase of a building for its use, but it certainly is the ultimate goal of all Circleville club women to eventually have a club home which they can call their own." She added:

"These women know what they want. A large home—one of the typical old Circleville homes—a place large enough for a banquet or a music club rehearsal and a study group at the same time, yet homey enough for a small committee meeting or entertaining a group at a club tea—a place where clubs will be proud to invite out-of-town affiliated groups for meetings."

Mrs. Poling admitted, however, that the problem of money is still to be solved. But she believes that "a group of determined women will find a way."

The constitution, which is still to be approved by the individual organizations, gives the association power to promote one fund raising project each year. Other funds must come from gifts.

Amvet Auxiliary Being Formed

An auxiliary women's organization to Circleville Amvets is being formed here and is awaiting its charter from district headquarters.

Mrs. Emmitt Morgan, elected temporary president of the group pending the arrival of the charter, said 13 women have enlisted into the organization to date.

Mrs. Edgar Anderson has been elected temporary secretary of the group.

Proposed Women's Club Combine Constitution Submitted For Approval

House Panel Facing Task

Representatives of 11 Circleville women's clubs met in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening to discuss the formation of the proposed organization, the Circleville Association of Women's Clubs.

With Mrs. Sterling Poling, temporary chairman, presiding and Mrs. Irma Stevenson serving as secretary pro tem, the club delegates discussed a constitution submitted to the group by an organizing committee elected at a previous meeting held in June. Serving on the organizing committee were Miss Rose Good, Mrs. Charles May, Mrs. A. J. Lyle, Mrs. Fred Grant and Mrs. Joe Bell.

Club delegates agreed to submit the constitution to their individual clubs for approval and report at the next meeting to be held Sept. 27, in the rooms of the Business and Professional Women's Club in Masonic Temple.

It was felt by club delegates at the Tuesday meeting that a majority of clubs would be able to take final action prior to the September meeting.

By October, all clubs should be able to elect representatives to the association, who will in turn elect permanent officers. These will appoint a house committee having one member from each organization making up the association.

The house committee will take on the task first of house hunting on a limited budget, and then of paying monthly bills and keeping the house in order for the women's clubs which will use it.

Mrs. Poling reported: "It is not now known whether the association will be able to immediately finance the purchase of a building for its use, but it certainly is the ultimate goal of all Circleville club women to eventually have a club home which they can call their own." She added:

"These women know what they want. A large home—one of the typical old Circleville homes — a place large enough for a banquet or a music club rehearsal and a study group at the same time, yet homey enough for a small committee meeting or entertaining a group at a club tea—a place where clubs will be proud to invite out-of-town affiliated groups for meetings."

Mrs. Poling admitted, however, that the problem of money is still to be solved. But she believes that "a group of determined women will find a way."

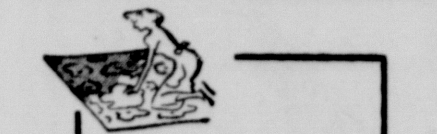

The constitution, which is still to be approved by the individual organizations, gives the association power to promote one fund raising project each year. Other funds must come from gifts.

Amvet Auxiliary Being Formed

An auxiliary women's organization to Circleville Amvets is being formed here and is awaiting its charter from district headquarters.

Mrs. Emmitt Morgan, elected temporary president of the group pending the arrival of the charter, said 13 women have enlisted into the organization to date.

Mrs. Edgar Anderson has been elected temporary secretary of the group.

Pickaway County Women's Republican Club met in Circleville Memorial Hall Monday afternoon.

Mrs. William Rush was in charge of the program which consisted of group singing followed by an address by Mrs. Golda Edmonston of Columbus, former state representative from Franklin County. She is now secretary of the Ohio Federation of Republican Women's Organizations.

At the business session, conducted by Mrs. Beryl Stevenson, the following women were named as delegates to the Fall conference of the Ohio Federation:

Mrs. H. O. Caldwell, Mrs. William Rush, Mrs. E. A. Payne and Mrs. Stevenson. Alternates will be Mrs. O. S. Mowery, Mrs. C. A. Bliss and Mrs. E. E. Crites.

The conference will be held in Columbus, Sept. 30 through Oct. 1.

Tisdale-Reid Reunion Held

Forty relatives and friends attended the Tisdale and Reid reunion held recently in Laurelville park.

A picnic dinner served at noon was followed by a business session at which the following officers were reelected: John Tisdale, president; Mrs. Everett Tatman, vice-president; and Densell W. Arledge, secretary-treasurer.

John Tisdale of Laurelville, 87, was the oldest member attending the reunion. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. John Tisdale, Mr. and Mrs. Odd Tisdale, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Tisdale and son, Orla Reid, and Paul Crago, of Laurelville; Eddie Hinton, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCaverty of Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd McCaverty of Rushville; Mr. and Mrs. James Ricketts, Mr. and Mrs. George Ricketts, and daughter, of Adelphi; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Tatman and family of Kingston Route 1, Densell W. Arledge, Mr. and Mrs. Rancy Arledge, Mrs. Walter Ebert of Circleville Route 4.

Second place was won by Jean Dearth of Saltcreek Victory Stitches. Her demonstration was on "Selection and Care of Nylon Hose."

Third place went to Wanda Maxson, also of Victory Stitches. She demonstrated "Good Equipment for Better Sewing."

Fourth place was won by Frances Hoffman of Wayne Willing Workers, with "Making Butterscotch Cookies."

Fifth place went to Helen Wright of Darby Flying Needles. Her demonstration was on "Making a Dish Towel."

Hill Climbers Hold Parley

Washington Hill Climbers 4-H Club met in the home of Kenneth Smith with 18 members answering rollcall. Project books were collected. A question and answer session on projects of members was conducted.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. Bobby Brobst will be host to the club when it meets Sept. 15.

EUROPE SEES NO CONFLICT

Stalin-Tito Word Swap Just Red Drumbeating?

LONDON, Aug. 24 — Ominous reports of grave developments in the widening breach between Marshal Stalin and Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito filled the European press today.

But qualified observers remained firmly convinced that the quarrel will remain in the propaganda stage for an indefinite period and ruled out the possibility that the situation will result in war.

It could lead, however, to an insurgent uprising in Yugoslavia itself. Even in this field, however, Tito seems to be firmly in control of the situation and there is every indication that dyed-in-the-wool adherents of the Kremlin and its international policies have been reduced to a definite minority.

The new fiery attacks against Tito in the controlled Soviet Communist press, which have included an open warning of "more effective measures" against him, are filled with sound and fury.

BUT IT IS remembered by the less panicky observers of the European political scene that Soviet Communism thrives on drumbeating. There must be a constant call to arms to keep the population in a state of excitement and suspense.

At the present time, the Yugoslavian situation is about the only weapon the Russian press possesses to whip up the people into an emotional state.

It is a common fallacy to think of Yugoslavia as a small, weak nation cowering on the fringes of Soviet Russia.

Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania and Bulgaria stand between it and Russia. While these nations are

State Eyeing Empty Buildings

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24—Public Works Director Samuel O. Linzell launched an investigation today into the possibility of using six temporary housing buildings at Ohio State's GI Village for state offices.

He acted on a request made by Governor Lausche yesterday at a meeting of cabinet officers in Lausche's office. The governor said he understood the buildings were not being used.

Lausche has been critical of high rents paid by the state of its state offices scattered over Columbus.

Legion Corps Books Practice

First practice session for the new American Legion drum and bugle corps is slated to be held in Memorial Hall at 8 p. m. Thursday.

Jack Simison, head of reorganizing the unit, said the corps probably will be a 25-piece outfit during its rebirth. He added that he hoped the group would be rehearsed in time to parade during this year's Pumpkin Show.

At the present time, the Yugoslavian situation is about the only weapon the Russian press possesses to whip up the people into an emotional state.

It is a common fallacy to think of Yugoslavia as a small, weak nation cowering on the fringes of Soviet Russia.

Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania and Bulgaria stand between it and Russia. While these nations are Soviet satellites in one sense or another, none of them appears to be the slightest bit disposed toward war.

The statement in Washington by Gen. Carl Spaatz criticizing President Truman's order reducing the strength of the United States Air Force is highly significant.

He is a military realist to the fingertips and was one of the first to see that Adolf Hitler was gearing Nazi Germany for a war of aggression.

SPAATZ SAID that the Air Force cut endangers defense of the United States. But in the same breath he expressed conviction that the atomic bomb and huge American bombing planes are deterring Russia from thoughts of war.

Marshal Tito, born Josip Broz, thus finds himself being made into a convenient whipping boy by Communist propagandists. And he is standing his ground, apparently certain that Moscow's fury will blow itself out when some new target of attack is found.

The Most Profitable MINUTES you Spend

...are spent in our Fleet-Wing Station

EIGHT out of every ten cars registered in the United States are 7 years old—or older. Every time the watch ticks off one minute, two cars—somewhere in the U. S.—go out of service.

A few minutes for lubrication service today may prevent expensive, time-taking repair service tomorrow.

Remember... the few minutes you wait while your car's battery, tires, radiator, chassis, and crankcase are being checked and serviced are the most profitable minutes you can spend.

Those minutes you spend in our Fleet-Wing Station will pay you big dividends by safeguarding one of your most precious possessions—your car.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

This is the story of a quadruple hex—as told me by Saber Khouri, owner, manager and chef of The Mecca, a Syrian restaurant in the heart of New York's rug district.

In the Syria of times gone by, a camel dealer named Tarra Singh once traveled to a far city, and when his business was completed he went to the hut of a soothsayer to see whether the stars were propitious for his return journey.

The seer studied his horoscope and said, "You will arrive safely, but between now and the change of the moon, you will kill three whom you love, and one whom you despise."

The dealer chuckled, threw the old man some coins, mounted his horse and set out for home, his dog loping behind him.

But when alone on the desert, he began to feel uneasy. Who were the three he loved? First, his wife; second, his horse; third, his dog. As for the fourth, the one he despised, he could think of no one who fitted the description.

Anxious to get back to his wife, he kept urging his horse to greater and greater speed and the following day, a few hundred yards from the first oasis, the animal fell to the ground and died.

Realizing the fault was his, the dealer prostrated himself and prayed for the forgiveness of Allah. But when he got to his feet, he saw his dog gorging itself on the meat of his horse and, infuriated, he drew his scimitar and cut off its head.

Now, Tarra Singh was afraid—half of the soothsayer's prophecy had already come true.

When he got to the gates of the city, he sent a messenger to his wife to tell her what had happened and to explain that only by never seeing her again could the rest of the prophecy be defeated.

His wife's answer arrived within the hour: "If you do not come, I will die of longing, and thus the prophecy will be fulfilled."

So Tarra went home, but he was unable to sleep or eat and the foreboding kept festering in his head. Finally he decided that the only way to frustrate the prophecy was to put an end to his life. But when he told his wife what he had in mind, she threw her arms around him and, by her tears, convinced him it was better to stay alive.

That night, however, unnerved by the dealer's talk of suicide, his wife decided to end the suspense by taking poison herself.

AND WHEN Tarra found her the next morning, there was a note telling him not to worry any more—that the prophecy was defeated because she had died by her own hand. But the dealer knew better. He knew that his threat to do away with himself was responsible for her death.

Now, three-fourths of the soothsayer's prediction had come true, and obviously it was his duty to kill the one person whom he despised—himself. But before he could carry out this resolve, a message arrived from the soothsayer.

"My son," it read, "forgive me. Soon after you left I discovered that I had, used the wrong chart when I plotted your future. Therefore, my predictions are without meaning and I can only hope they have not caused you too much anguish."

A few days later, the soothsayer was found dead. His head had been cut off with a single blow of a scimitar.

"The yarn doesn't add up," I said to the Syrian restaurateur. "If the soothsayer used the wrong chart, it was all coincidence and the story has no point."

Sabor Khouri smiled. "What the soothsayer actually discovered after Tarra Singh's departure was that the fourth and last act of violence he had predicted was destined to be his own

This particular statement is identical with the Communist attitude toward our schools. In a word, parents shall have no voice in the education of their children; the community shall have no voice—because the teacher must be free to do as she pleases.

What is meant by "free inquiry" in relation to an elementary school teacher who is hired by the community to teach arithmetic, spelling, reading, writing, something about this country?

Miss Russell says of teachers who are to be fired under the Feinberg Act:

"The six teachers whose jobs are threatened by the local witch-hunt have a total of more than 120 years of satisfactory and even superior service."

Who is to decide whether their teaching has been "satisfactory and even superior"—the school authorities, the community, the parents?

The Feinberg Act declares: "The consequence of any such infiltration into the public schools is that subversive propaganda can be disseminated among children of tender years by those who teach them and to whom the children look for guidance, authority and leadership. The legislature finds that members of such groups frequently use their office or position to advocate and teach subversive doctrines. The legislature finds that such dissemination of propaganda may be and frequently is sufficiently subtle to escape detection in the classroom."

Loyalty must be defined as love of country, as exclusive love of country.

25,000 To See Robinson Fight

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—An expected crowd of 25,000 will turn out in Yankee Stadium tonight to see whether it is true what they say about Sugar Ray Robinson.

What they say about the welterweight champion is that he is the best middleweight in the world and he gets his chance to lend weight in the argument by meeting Steve Belloise, cagy veteran, in a non-title 10-round.

The betting odds favor Robinson at 13 to 5, despite the fact that he is meeting one of the most durable and most lethal of middleweights.

Parents Cited In Lad's Death

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24 — The mother and stepfather of a 13-year-old Cataula Park boy who died apparently of an overdose of sleeping pills were the objects of a delinquency complaint today.

The boy, Thomas Hall, will be buried tomorrow afternoon. He was found dead in his bed by his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Allen C. Dix, when they returned home yesterday afternoon.

A bottle of sleeping tablets was found near the boy's body. Sheriff's Deputy Paul Stormont, Franklin County homicide investigator, filed the complaint against Mr. and Mrs. Dix after questioning them yesterday. The coroner is awaiting a toxicologist's report on an autopsy.

Business Hiking Ad Volume

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 — Newspaper advertising lineage in 52 leading American cities increased one and six-tenths percent in July over the same month last year, according to a tabulation by Medea Records.

Total 52-city newspaper advertising lineage for the first seven months of this year was three and eight-tenths percent greater than in the comparable period of 1948.

The survey revealed that newspaper advertising has increased over the preceding year in every month except one since January, 1945.

Youth Drowns In 40-Foot Well

ZANESVILLE, Aug. 24 — Gerald W. Poling, 16, of Sarahville, drowned yesterday when he was apparently overcome by gasoline pump fumes and fell into a 40-foot well on an Adamsville farm.

Sheriff's deputies said Poling and a brother-in-law were cleaning the well.

28-Year-Old Slaying Recalled

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24 — Guy Harris, 55, was under a second degree murder indictment today for a slaying 28 years ago.

Harris, who allegedly shot and killed Milt Bloodshaw in an alley, fled Columbus and did not return until 1944. He was picked up recently. The Franklin County grand jury indicted Harris yesterday.

BILL TO BUY GIANTS?

'Brains' Mumbling Again: Veeck To Sell His Tribe

CHICAGO, Aug. 24—Don't be too surprised if Bill Veeck, the junior-grade MacPhail, consents to take the million dollars and leave Cleveland for parts not yet fully indicated at the close of this year's American League season. So the "brains" hereabouts are mumbling.

There are even those who more than hint that the deal is practically made. That Veeck is ready to sell and a group of stockholders ready to buy, with Hank Greenberg very prominently mentioned in this connection.

When last heard from, this coterie indicated it would be absolutely dejected over parting with Bill, but believe it would be able to master its emotion with a visible effort.

When last heard of, Bill was said to have been back in New York, trying to buy the Giants from Horace Stoneham, which would be doing it the difficult way. It might be simpler, in fact, to try buying the tomb from under Grant.

MAYBE THE Giants aren't much. Maybe they look like something that came up out of the floor after a heavy rain. But not to Horace, who loves them.

Just how he stands on a million dollars cannot be readily ascertained, owing to the fact that he's one of those boys if he ever got a million, he'd soon find some way of not having it.

A party like that will do two of three things. He'll throw it away, or give it away, but rarely sell it.

Young Veeck picked another tough one last Fall when he tried to buy the White Sox—lock, stock and stadium—from Charles Comiskey 2nd, aged 23, and no doubt a little obdurate in matters of this kind. The story is that Veeck tried again recently, and got nowhere in 10 seconds flat.

But last night, General Manager Frank Lane flatly denied there had been further negotiations saying dryly:

"I doubt if Bill (Veeck) would think it worth while."

Just what he may have thought, if at all, in connection with the Brooklyn Dodgers might be interesting to know—for several reasons.

Black Majesty Takes Feature

WESTBURY, N. Y., Aug. 24—In a four-horse blanket finish, Black Majesty squeezed out a victory in the featured Winston-Salem Pace at the mile and one-sixteenth distance last night at Roosevelt Raceway.

Driven by Clint Hodgins, the four-year-old black horse took an early lead to set the pace for the entire route and withstood challenges in the stretch by Snap Up, My Scott and Royal Star. In winning in 2:14 4-5, the victor scored his second triumph of the season.

Yanks Grab Mize Like Final Straw

Big Fellow Seen Making Difference

The Yankees explained that their attitude in getting the big fellow was to keep the Boston Red Sox or Cleveland Indians from winding up with him. They figured he was worth it at the price no matter what he does, so long as he isn't with one of the rival clubs.

The Boston Red Sox are right at their heels with the pennant stake. Mize may be the difference—or he may not help at all. The Giants, who need help themselves, didn't want him, which may be the tipoff.

LUCK SMILES ON THE BRONX

Yanks Hold League Lead; Bosox, Indians Lose, Too

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—The New York Yankees are the luckiest team in the major leagues today.

True, a team beset with injuries and maladies all season long that can still manage to lead its league at this stage of the campaign may be considered a little more than just lucky.

The Yankees looked anything but like a club that is setting the pace in the American League yesterday as they absorbed an 8 to 4 drubbing at the British Youth Swims Channel; Sets No Record

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 24—Philip Mickman, chubby 18-year-old British schoolboy, swam the English Channel today in a heroic day-and-night battle against rain squalls, unfavorable tides and heavy seas. He was the youngest swimmer ever to accomplish the feat.

Mickman's time for the 19-mile crossing was 23 hours and 48 minutes, the second slowest on record. When he splashed ashore at Kingsdown, seven miles north of Dover, it was estimated he had covered about 40 miles. At one point the tides swept him 14 miles off his course.

The youth's trainer, Ted Temme—himself a channel record-holder—said that three-and-a-half hours before Philip succeeded, he would have given "100 to one" against his chances. Channel experts said the boy's effort was probably "the most grueling ever."

As Mickman emerged from the water at 5:33 a. m. (British time), another channel hopeful, Cuban Jose Cortinas, took the plunge at Cap Gris-Nez, France, the same spot Philip left from. This is Cortinas' second try in a week.

The Ossett, Yorkshire, youngster's father said that at 2:30 a. m., the party aboard the accompanying boat feared the boy would have to abandon his attempt, "but Philip grimly battled on."

Novice Shooters Claim Laurels In Shotgun Meet

VANDALIA, Aug. 24—The winners of the North American clay target championships at the Golden Grand American trapshoot are Arnold Riegger, the 29-year-old Seattle mechanic, and Mrs. Claude Winterowd of Chicago, who have been shooting only three years.

Riegger shot a perfect score in the regulation 200-target, 16-yard event, and was tied with three others. But he outlasted them in blasting pigeons in two 25-target shootoffs.

Mrs. Winterowd clipped the women's title with her record-breaking 197 of 200.

Ed Garlington of Atlanta, Levi Shick of Bellefontaine and Mercer Tenille of Shreveport, La., tied Riegger with perfect 200s. Tenille missed one of the 25 targets in the first shootoff to fall into fourth place. The rest went on.

Shick and Garlington each missed one in the final playoff, and Riegger broke his 25, picking up the title and leaving the pieces. A secondary shootoff gave Garlington second place when Shick missed one for 24.

Herbert Parsons of Sumnerville, Tenn., and Homer Clark Jr. of Alton, Ill., deadlocked in the professional championship, so they'll shootoff for the title today. They got 199 of 200 apiece.

Saints Pick Up Victory Over Columbus Birds

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24—The St. Paul Saints won their game with sixth-place Columbus last night by a tight, 2-1 score, to stay 4½ games in the American Association lead.

Jim Romano, giving up five hits, won the contest for the Apostles, and Harvey Haddix and Bob Habenicht gave up the same number, but in the right places.

Haddix gave the Saints their two winning runs in the second frame when he made an error. He threw wildly to first after Ozark walked. Anderson shot home and Ozark scored when Hicks singled.

The Birds score came in the eighth.

Meanwhile, second-place Indianapolis won its tilt with Milwaukee, blanking the Brewers, 3-0. Single scores in the third, seventh and eighth did it for the Indians.

Minneapolis beat Louisville, 7-3, and Toledo downed Kansas City, 14-7.

Keiser Holding Strong Lead In Ohio Open

CANTON, Aug. 24—Herman Keiser, his game sharpened by four years in the big-time pro golf circuit, held a comfortable four-stroke lead with an eight-under-par 136 going into the final 36 holes of the Ohio Open championship here today.

Keiser will be after $1,200 in prize money he can win if he holds the lead today. He also has his sights set on Bryon Nelson's Ohio Open record of 271 set in 1941 in Cincinnati, but he would have to shoot 135 in the final 36.

Dick Shoemaker, 39-year-old Cleveland pro, seemed to have the best chance to overtake Keiser should he falter today in the finals today. Shoemaker carded a total of 140 yesterday, four under par and still within shouting distance of Keiser.

Running third is Andy Moccary, Salem Golf Club pro, with 72-70—142, and tied at 143 are Louis Chapetta of Toledo and Alex Ogilvie, 35-year-old Cleveland pro.

Blancett Cops Columbus Meet

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24—Don Blancett, a Zanesville amateur, today held the Columbus District Open golf crown, captured with his one-over-par 73 yesterday and 68 Monday.

Blancett's 141 total bested the runner-up and defending champion, Danny Carmichael, who carded 143 for the 36-hole event. Carmichael shot par 72 golf yesterday, but ran over on Monday's card.

Blancett got for his troubles a yearly rotating trophy and a $100 merchandise certificate.

Yanks Grab Mize Like Final Straw

Big Fellow Seen Making Difference

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—The New York Yankees obtained Johnny Mize from the New York Giants because he hits that long ball to right, among other things.

The other things include all the miseries a team may anticipate in the midst of a pennant race.

Mize appears to be about through, so near the finish that even the Giants didn't want him. Yet he might be the difference for the Yankees over in the other league in the pennant scramble.

As the Yankees stood before acquiring him Monday night, they had no reserve first baseman. An injury to Tommy Henrich must mean that Billy Johnson be moved over from third base.

However, even if Henrich remains in the best of health, Joe DiMaggio is not too robust and it may be that any moment Henrich will be needed in the outfield, which will open the gate for Mize at first base.

THE YANKEES play 21 of their last 25 games in Yankee Stadium and by that time, will have oriented Mize to the American League so that he can take dead aim on the rightfield wall, as the first baseman if needed.

Offhand, Mize doesn't appear to be a bargain at any price. He is hitting just above .200, he is slow and old and he probably doesn't have many home runs left. Still he could mean the difference for the Yankees in the pennant race.

The Yankees explained that their attitude in getting the big fellow was to keep the Boston Red Sox or Cleveland Indians from winding up with him. They figured he was worth it at the price no matter what he does, so long as he isn't with one of the rival clubs.

From the Giants' standpoint the thing was academic. Mize and Manager Leo Durocher didn't get along particularly well and Mize couldn't be possibly figured in the current rebuilding of the club.

They wanted to get rid of him but not in their own league, where somehow he might get hot and belt their brains out. Now that they have got Mize, the Yankees—or Manager Casey Stengel—must figure out what to do with him. They may shuffle everything around soon to fit him into the lineup.

DIMAGGIO, for instance, has lost about 16 pounds in the last few weeks and isn't up to par with the result that he has not been playing centerfield in customary fashion.

He may be shifted to another post, probably left, bringing Henrich into the outfield and leaving first base to Mize.

The Yankees are confronted by the task of trying to hold the American League lead, which has been theirs from the start of the season. They grabbed Mize like a straw that might keep them afloat.

The Boston Red Sox are right at their heels with the pennant at stake. Mize may be the difference—or he may not help at all. The Giants, who need help themselves, didn't want him, which may be the tipoff.

Fairgrounds Being Readied For 1949 Pickaway Show

Best Dairy Show Ever Is Assured

More Outdoor Facilities Needed

Pickaway County Fair officials Wednesday were swinging into action toward the opening of the 1949 agricultural exposition here.

Entries applications for various livestock shows were being received, racetrack custodians were taking extra time to dress down the oval for coming harness races, groundskeepers were whacking away tall grass, show buildings were cleaned and even the big coliseum was being geared for various exhibits.

Tom Harman, fair board secretary, has moved his office from the courthouse to the coliseum and there is setting up his books, receiving entry blanks, talking to concession men and answering the usual questions.

Harman reported Wednesday that the 1949 fair "will be the best ever." He declared:

"Already, we are assured of the biggest dairy cattle show in the county's history. The Central Ohio Breeding Association—that is the test-tube breeding outfit—is procuring entries in for our show. We have entries from that group from Lima, Hudson, Sidney, Kent, Uniontown and Marion."

ENTRIES FROM Pickaway County are coming in, too. Harman reported that the first livestock entry came from a young fellow living on Circleville Route 3.

He is Joseph Blue who has entered five head of Herefords in the Open Livestock show. These are eligible for the Junior Fair show, too.

The fair secretary said that it is evident that larger outdoor facilities will be needed for the 1949 fair than were required last year.

He said that Larry Best, county agricultural agent and Junior Fair chieftain reported that 40 outside pens and 100 tie rail positions will be needed in addition to all present barn facilities.

Fair officials, looking to the needs of the grandstand-less race track, have acquired a new fine canvass covering for the present temporary bleachers.

Failure of county voters to approve construction of a grandstand leaves fair officials with little alternative but to provide catch-as-catch-can facilities.

Harman said that arrangements have been made to completely spray the fairgrounds against insects on the Friday before the fair opens.

He said that Joseph Mooney of Columbus, who sprays the state fairgrounds, will bring in his mobile equipment to complete saturate all building interiors and areas in the vicinity of buildings. Chemical used, Harman said, is far more powerful than DDT.

Goldschmidt, Marr Candidates For Club Chief

Circleville Kiwanis Club members this week were studying the ballot they will cast next Monday night in selection of officers for 1950.

Candidates for president are Dr. David Goldschmidt and Arthur Marr. Neither has held office previously in the club other than being members of the board of directors.

The chosen man will replace G. Guy Campbell, present president. The current vice-president, H. K. (Bill) Lanman, who probably would have been elected to the presidency without opposition, declined to allow his name to be placed on the ballot.

Candidates for vice-president will be Frank Wantz and John Heiskell. The latter is the club's present secretary, appointed by the president.

Names up for treasurer are Arthur Wagar and Forest Croman. One will replace the present money-keeper, Paul Hang.

Seven directors will be named from the following list: Dr. Richard Samuel (only incumbent nominated), Dwight Steel, Harold Clifton, Elmon Richards, Harry Barton, Joe Bell, Dr. William Rickey, Truman Eberly, Dr. W. Lloyd Sprouse, Leonard Williams, David McDonald, Bertus Bennett, and Lanman.

Local Musician In Champion Moose Band

A 16-year-old Circleville musician was a member of the Columbus Moose Lodge band, which tied for first place in a national parade contest in San Francisco.

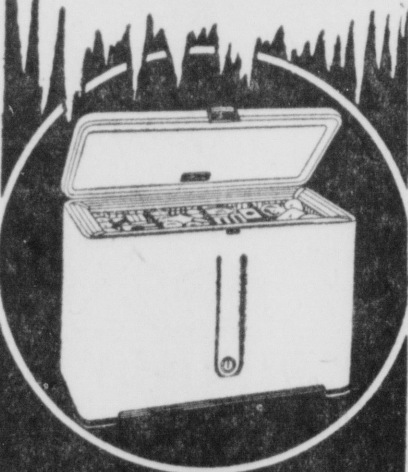

He is Gary Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Brown of North Pickaway street, who totted a cornet with the prize-winning 32-piece Columbus group.

Young Brown said his band tied for the first place laurels with San Diego, Calif., in the contest in which 20 other bands competed.

Don Port, brother-in-law to the local cornetist, is director of the Columbus band, a three-year-old organization which tied the 20-year-old San Diego outfit.

The Columbus Moose band, along with its drill team, performed for Pickaway Countians during last year's Pumpkin Show.

AFL Chieftain Opens Anti-Taft Battle Of Words

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24—The AFL "Beat Taft" drum sounded loudly throughout Ohio today on the heels of President William Green's pep-talk to almost 1,000 Ohio convention delegates.

The 76-year-old former Co-shooton miner promised the "biggest single effort" to defeat a candidate his union has ever made, and told of a $750,000—or "million-dollar, if necessary"—radio broadcast budget voted last week by the AFL National Executive Council in Toronto, Ont., "to tell the truth about labor."

Green predicted certain defeat in 1950 for the co-author of the AFL-hated Taft-Hartley law. He said $1 of each $2 contribution asked of eight million AFL members would be returned to Ohio because "Taft's defeat is

George Roth Jr. Estate Valued At $21,094

The estate of George E. Roth has been appraised at a net total value of $21,094, including a 148-acre farm in Jackson Township valued at $14,825.

Under the terms of the Roth Jr. will, the farm goes to his widow, Nannie E. Roth for the term of her natural life, and then passes to George L. Roth, his son, to be his sole property in fee simple.

A partition suit filed in common pleas court by George L. Roth affects a different estate of approximately 208 acres in Jackson Township which was left to Roth Jr. by his father, George E. Roth Sr., for the term of his natural life, then passing to the heirs of Roth Jr.

The heirs are George L. Roth, Elizabeth Roth Watt, Mary Roth Boggs, and Nannie E. Roth.

The plea for partition states that the last will and testament of Roth Sr. devised the real estate as follows:

To his wife, Elizabeth Roth, for and during the term of her natural life and at her death to Roth Jr. for and during his natural life and at his death to his heirs "of the blood of said testator in fee simple." Elizabeth Roth is deceased.

A commission appointed by the court appraised the estate at $79,298. The court ordered that since Nannie E. Roth had consented to have her interest in money, the estate be sold at public auction.

AFL Chieftain Opens Anti-Taft Battle Of Words

COLUMBUS, Aug. 24—The AFL "Beat Taft" drum sounded loudly throughout Ohio today on the heels of President William Green's pep-talk to almost 1,000 Ohio convention delegates.

The 76-year-old former Co-shooton miner promised the "biggest single effort" to defeat a candidate his union has ever made, and told of a $750,000—or "million-dollar, if necessary"—radio broadcast budget voted last week by the AFL National Executive Council in Toronto, Ont., "to tell the truth about labor."

Green predicted certain defeat in 1950 for the co-author of the AFL-hated Taft-Hartley law. He said $1 of each $2 contribution asked of eight million AFL members would be returned to Ohio because "Taft's defeat is the most important goal in the program."

Taft, Ohio's senior senator and a Republican, will begin a speaking tour throughout his home state in Cleveland on Labor Day, Green said.

"We'll follow Taft—around Ohio with our own speakers, bringing our message to the public. International union presidents will come to put the union membership behind the campaign to defeat the senator."

Green urged the delegates to "drive out of public life the co-author of the freedom-robbing bill, the Taft-Hartley law."

George Roth Jr. Estate Valued At $21,094

The estate of George E. Roth has been appraised at a net total value of $21,094, including a 148-acre farm in Jackson Township valued at $14,825.

Under the terms of the Roth Jr. will, the farm goes to his widow, Nannie E. Roth for the term of her natural life, and then passes to George L. Roth, his son, to be his sole property in fee simple.

A partition suit filed in common pleas court by George L. Roth affects a different estate of approximately 208 acres in Jackson Township which was left to Roth Jr. by his father, George E. Roth Sr., for the term of his natural life, then passing to the heirs of Roth Jr.

The heirs are George L. Roth, Elizabeth Roth Watt, Mary Roth Boggs, and Nannie E. Roth.

The plea for partition states that the last will and testament of Roth Sr. devised the real estate as follows:

To his wife, Elizabeth Roth, for and during the term of her natural life and at her death to Roth Jr. for and during his natural life and at his death to his heirs "of the blood of said testator in fee simple." Elizabeth Roth is deceased.

A commission appointed by the court appraised the estate at $79,298. The court ordered that since Nannie E. Roth had consented to have her interest in money, the estate be sold at public auction.
